

Living here in Alabama, I have learned two things:

1. I am censored to what I can watch on my television, even though I pay for it.
2. There is only one cable company offered in the city where I live. Even though other cable companies have tried to establish business here, the politicians and the local wealthy family that owns the cable company have squashed any competition. So I am out of local channels. Which is another story on how politicians killed that.

I PAY for my satellite TV and radio. I definitely do not want any politician to tell me what I can and cannot watch or listen to. This is supposed to be a free country, until that is when money is involved, and lots of it.
